Neighborhood Entry Sign at Meyer Blvd & Wornall Rd

President's Letter

On behalf of the Board at Greenway Fields, we hope you had a fantastic summer and fit in some relaxing activities. As I walk around the neighborhood, I enjoy looking at the flowers, seeing the many different architectural styles, and of course, the trees! I start to think about the times these homes have witnessed. In the past 100 years, insulin was invented, frozen food was introduced, the first helicopter was flown, aerosol spray cans were developed, the Barbie Doll became a household staple, the internet changed our lives, and mapping of the human DNA was completed.

In 2017, Greenway Fields will be 100 years old! One hundred years is a great milestone and we would like the neighborhood looking its best. Plus we think a celebration of some sort is in order.

The Board has started the planning process to mark this event and we would like your input. A survey is on the homes association website at www.greenwayfields.org/survey We will be continuing to use this link to get your feedback periodically so that our efforts are a reflection of what the residents value.

We want to know how and where we can improve our neighborhood to start. Plus, we would love to have our neighbors join in the planning. One question on the survey is whether you would like to be on the centennial planning committee.

Please give us your input and do enjoy our cooler fall days!

Improving Our Park

If you use Strawn Park (at 63rd & Summit/Valley), you will have noticed that the usually damp areas of the park have turned into a veritable swamp. Our very wet spring and summer have exacerbated the known drainage problems in the park, causing the Hermes statues to shift on their foundations and making the north side of the park difficult to navigate on foot or in a stroller after a heavy rain. Improvements are in the works! The GFHA board recently commissioned a survey and engineering plan to fix the drainage in the park and are in the process of sending the plan out for bids in the hopes of implementing a solution before the next monsoon season begins. We will keep you posted on progress through the newsletters.

Eliminating Racially Restrictive Covenants in Greenway Fields

BY SCOTT KAISER

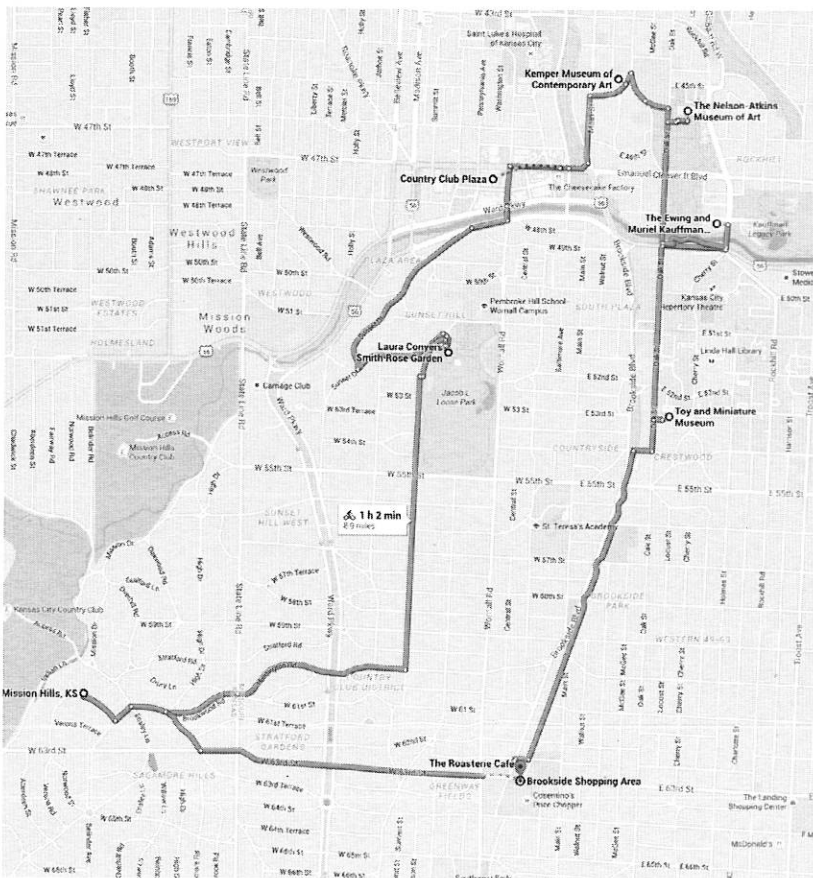

The first restrictive covenants for Greenway Fields were established by the J.C. Nichols Investment Company in 1917. Like other subdivisions in the Country Club District, these early restrictions included a provision that prohibited all present and future property owners from selling their homes to blacks.

Greenway Fields was not an outlier. Between 1908 and 1954, approximately 62% (138 of 221) subdivisions in Jackson County had racially restrictive covenants. During approximately the same time frame, such covenants were very common in subdivisions in Johnson County (96%), Clay County (71%), and Platte County (74%). Source: Gotham, K.F., Urban Space, Restrictive Covenants and the Origins of Racial Residential Segregation in a US City, 1900–1950 (Int'l Jour. of Urban and Regional Research, Vol 24.3, Sept. 2000), 624.

In 1948, however, the US Supreme Court decided Shelley v. Kraemer, 334 U.S. 1 (1948), a landmark case which held that courts could not enforce racially restrictive covenants on real estate.

While that decision made such covenants legally unenforceable, the text of these covenants didn't magically disappear. Over 50 years passed. In 2005, the Missouri legislature passed §213.030, which mandates that homes associations "shall amend, without approval of owners, any declaration or other governing document that includes a restrictive covenant [that discriminates on the basis of race, color, religion, national origin, ancestry, sex, disability, or familial status]."

Today, the Greenway Fields website has a copy of the original Greenway Fields Homes Association Restrictions, minus the racially restrictive covenants.

A Cyclist's View of Kansas City

A Cyclist's View of Kansas City

BY BOB DEEG

Come take a bike ride with me and visit some of the highlights of Kansas City, all within a few short miles of Greenway Fields.

We'll start our bike tour northbound on the Trolley Trail adjacent to the Roasterie Café on 62nd Terrace. Our first stop is the National Museum of Toys & Miniatures near Oak & 52nd Street that house the world's largest fine-scale miniature collection, with over 70,000 objects in its possession.

Heading north on Cherry Street we cross Brush Creek and stop to take in the Ewing and Muriel Kauffman Memorial Garden. This 2-acre meticulously maintained garden features 7,000 plants, with varieties that include vintage and modern perennials, annuals, shrubs, bulbs and trees.

Peddling north we come upon the fabulous Nelson-Atkins Museum of Art, recognized internationally as one of the finest general art museums in the United States, and admission is free! Don't miss the recently installed Four Seasons sculptures by Philip Haas.

Our next stop is the Kemper Museum of Contemporary Art, just NW of the Nelson. The Kemper presents 8-12 exhibitions per year and includes a permanent collection with works by Dale Chihuly, Andrew Wyeth, Georgia O'Keeffe, Frank Stella & Robert Mapplethorpe, among others.

Time for a break from all this peddling so let's glide downhill SE to the Country Club Plaza, for some refreshing food and drink or a bit of shopping. The Plaza was the brainchild of land developer J.C. Nichols, who started buying the 55 acres of land in 1907. Back then it was a swamp covered dumping ground, with a hog farm on one end and a brickyard on the other. When the construction of the Plaza was announced in 1922, many of the city's leaders called it Nichols' Folly. What they didn't see was a master plan that was years in the making and reflected a study of shopping areas around the world. Nichols himself handpicked and meticulously placed works of art to adorn the Plaza's streets, buildings, sidewalks and fountains using antique sculptures, columns and tile-adorned murals. History buffs may already know that the Plaza became the first major shopping area in the country to be constructed to cater to people arriving by automobile.

Now it's time to churn & burn. Heading south from the Plaza on Wornall Road find your lowest gear and grind up the hill to Loose Park. Stop to wander through the amazing Laura Conyers Smith Rose Garden and take a stroll around the pond, carefully sidestepping the calling cards left by the ever-present geese and ducks. Heart rate back to normal, we head west on 52nd Street to see some of the area's finest older homes, in Mission Hills. Turn south on Sunset Drive and then cross Ward Pkwy on 55th Street. Meandering south between Indian Creek and State Line we take in the stately beauty of luxurious older homes surrounded by manicured landscapes. At 63rd Street head east again to our starting point. On our trusty bike we've seen 2 states, 3 museums filled with an amazing array of modern and classic art, an incredible shopping/restaurant district and 2 fabulous garden parks. Wasn't that fun?
